Theme

PREVIEW

- Theme is the central idea of a work of literature that depicts a message or moral from the author.
- Theme is not just one word, such as "love" or "war." It must be a concept expressed using a complete sentence, in message form, such as: "love requires sacrifice," or "war can turn ordinary people into heroes."
- Stories can contain more than one theme.

Universal Theme

PREVIEW

- A theme is not specific to one person or setting. It must be universal.

- You can express the same message to someone living in France in 1805 that can also be said to someone living in America in 1970.
- It is a timeless message.

Finding Theme

PREVIEW

Ask: What message is the author trying to tell me?

Concept → Message → Universal = Theme

For example, a concept from a text = Love. But, love is not a message. A complete theme = Love is risky and irrational.

You can warn anyone from any time period that love is risky and irrational. It's universal.

Theme doesn't have to be a true statement; it is just the opinion of the author based on evidence from the story.
